Diplomas Are Given To Mid-Year Class Of Senior High Friday

Commencement Program Is Presented In Auditorium At Cathedral Last Night

UNIVERSITY HEAD MAKES ADDRESS

Class Of Graduates Total 210—Special Awards Are Presented To Members

Character, initiative and co-operation with others might seem old points to sound on commencement night—but the 210 seniors given diplomas last night in Senior high school's 74th graduation ceremonies are probably more than ever persuaded today that they still form the prime ingredients of any formula for successful and happy living.

For Dr. Robert Williams, eloquent president of Ohio Northern university at Ada, O., speaking to the graduates and a huge audience in the Cathedral auditorium, told them:

Cornerstone of Life

"These three things—character and initiative and the ability to work with others—are the great cornerstones of life. They are today—they always have been."

Dr. Williams put himself in the place of one of the members of the graduating class—he called himself the 211th—and spoke as though he were a senior voicing his hopes on a night of supreme triumph.

He said some seniors, like all young men and women in the past, are anxious for money, and some are anxious for power, and he admitted that was a most natural thing. But he added:

"I want to wish for all the graduates that they make all the money

Sweeping sidewalks of snow has become almost a daily task during the past few weeks. Nightly enough snow falls to require cleaning of the walks in the morning. Because of the severe cold weather, the snow is rather dry and is easily removed, however.

In case you don't remember it, a year ago today was the coldest of last winter, when the mercury dropped to four below zero. It fell to zero the next day, and that was all that particular cold snap amounted to. February was comparatively mild, too, with one brief cold spell when the temperature dropped to one below zero, bouncing back up to 42 degrees the next day.

Owen Fox, forester, has received a number of inquiries, regarding the scarcity of hair on the hides of some of the squirrels seen around homes. Mr. Fox states that when bread is put out, to feed the wild birds, care should be taken to place it where squirrels can not secure it. Eating bread, which contains salt and yeast, by squirrels, has a tendency to cause the animals to lose their hair, he says. Corn, apples, carrots, nuts, raw peanuts, are the best foods for squirrels, he says.

Britain-Japan Sharply Divided On Ship Incident

Negotiations Progress Over Incident Of Removal Of Nazis From Japanese Ship

(International News Service)

TOKYO, Jan. 27—Britain and Japan remain sharply divided over the Asama Maru incident, it was indicated tonight after Britain sent a note—understood to be conciliatory in tone—in response to Japan's protest over removal of 21 Germans from the transpacific liner

Negotiations, however, were opened at once when Sir Robert L. Craigie, Britaain ambassador delivered the reply to foreign minister Hachiro Arita.

A Japanese communique said: "Discussions on the whole subject occurred, each side maintaining its viewpoint.

"It was agreed that a further exchange of views would occur next week.

"Text of the British note will be published simultaneously in London and Tokyo January 29."

Finns Report 1,000 Red Troops Killed In One Day —Coldest Weather Of 60 Years

By PETER DE HEMMER GUDME
International News Service Staff Correspondent

HELSINKI, Jan. 27—For the sixth successive day three Russian army divisions today threw themselves vainly against Finland's lines north of Lake Ladoga with a double objective—to swing around the lake to the rear of the Mannerheim line, and to rescue a fourth division trapped at Kitelae.

Altogether more than 60,000 Russian troops are engaged in this, the largest single offensive of the war.

Even the Finns were willing to concede that heroic efforts were being made by the Russians to pry open the jaws of the Finnish trap against difficulties which included the coldest weather in 60 years plus the necessity of hauling supplies over lakelands and through forests.

Using Tried Out Tactics

In this sub-zero temperature, amid frozen lakes and atop deep snow, the Finns are using tactics long before found successful on far different terrain. Military authorities and the Finns learned how to fight as they are doing from the methods employed by Lawrence of Arabia in his famous World War campaign in the desert.

Expect Freak Cold Wave In South To Moderate Over Coming Week End

(International News Service)

A freak cold wave which plunged temperatures below zero in areas far south of the Mason and Dixon line still held the southland in its grip today, but relief was promised for the week end.

Such readings, at 4 at Chattanooga, Tenn., 3 at Meridian, Miss., 3 at Greensboro, N. C., and 2 at Jackson, Miss., were recorded during the frigid morning hours today Yesterday, Chattanooga's mercury dropped to 12 below zero.

Rising Temperatures

The forecast for the "Sunny Southland"—now ice bound over wide areas—was generally fair with slowly rising temperatures. In general, thermometer readings were 5 to 10 degrees higher than yesterday.

Meanwhile, the cold wave was broken in the Rocky Mountan region, with a 2 above reading at Pueblo the coldest in an area where winter temperatures far below zero are nothing out of the ordinary. Readings of 41 Albuquerque, 42 at Denver and 34 at Cheyenne was reported.

War Interest Now Focusing On Rumania

Oil Supply Of Country Is Cause Of Problem For King Carol

GERMAN TROOPS ON RUMANIAN BORDER

By CAPTAIN JOHN H. CRAIGE

NEW YORK, Jan. 27.—With the meeting of the Balkan entente just a week off, attention in Europe is focussing on Rumania. There is no doubt that Rumania's strategic situation and the probability that if the war is to spread, this is where the break is likely to begin.

The trouble is that Rumania possesses far and away the richest oil fields in Europe. This district on the Danube produces more than 7,000,000 tons of black liquid gold a year, and could probably double that figure if the pressure were put on. That is an enormous amount. If Germany could get all of it, the problem of obtaining fuel for Nazi tanks and airplanes would be solved.

In normal times most of this oil finds its way into German markets, shipped largely by tank-steamers to north German ports. Now the allied

Snow flurries were light and intermittent, the fall generally being almost negligible.

Ten degrees above zero was recorded officially at both Harrisburg and Pittsburgh, while Philadelphia this morning had a reading of 13 above.

Slighly colder weather was expected before the "slow rise" promised in weather bureau forecasts will be felt.

Find 20-Year-Old Girl Dead In Car

Detroit Police Seek To Solve Mystery By Discovery Of Body Of Girl

(International News Service)

DETROIT, Jan. 27.—Miss Betty Esz, pretty 20-year-old WPA seamstress known to her friends as "Doll," was found dead today on the rear seat of an automobile parked in a garage in the rear of her home.

Cause of the girl's death was not immediately established.

Four notes, all signed "Hank," were found in her pocketbook and police began a search for her fiance, John "Hank" Thomas of Detroit.

The girl's stepfather, John Simon, who discovered the body, said that Thomas had the girl cash checks for $105 and $40 for him on banks where he had no accounts. Because of this, Simon said, the girl decided to break her engagement but she received a note from Thomas threatening to kill her and himself if she did.

Senator Wheeler Further Projected Into Picture As Possible Nominee

By GEORGE DURNO

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27.—Further projection of Senator Burton K. Wheeler of Montana into the 1940 Presidential picture, and rumors that President Roosevelt will make an important political statement some time in February, featured activity of the Democratic campaign front today.

Roosevelt Silent

The rumors concerning a possible statement by the President—presumably on his third term intentions—emanated from congressional sources. At the White House Mr. Roosevelt continued to parry all questions on that subject, and his aides were without information on it.

Senator Wheeler, who urged in Columbus, O., that the President make his political intentions known soon to prevent the Democratic party from being plunged into "a chaotic condition", found his own stock as a Presidential prospect rising. Thomas Is Named Borah's Successor

Former Senator From Idaho Appointed To Fill Vacancy Caused By Senator Borah's Death

(International News Service)

BOISE, Idaho, Jan. 27.—John W. Thomas, former U. S. senator from Idaho, today prepared to assume the senatorial vacancy created by the death of William E. Borah.

Thomas, a Republican, was appointed last night by Governor C. A. Bottolfsen, life long friend and admirer of Borah, whose distinguished career ended with his death a week ago in Washington.

Thomas served in the senate from 1928 to 1932, when he was defeated for a second term by James R. Pope, a Democrat.

Originally appointed to the senate in June, 1928, to fill the unexpired term of Frank R. Goodring, he was elected in November of the same year to complete Goodring's term.

Under Idaho law, Thomas will serve until the next state general election in January, and may then seek election to carry out the remainder of the unexpired term Borah would have served.

Knew Too Much, Was Reason For Arrest Of Young

J. B. Powell, Editor And Publisher Of Chinese Weekly Review Gives His Viewpoint

(International News Service)

SHANGHAI, Jan. 27.—James R. Young, far eastern manager of International News Service, was taken into custody, in Tokyo by Japanese municipal police because he "knew too much" about actual conditions in China and Japan, according to J. B. Powell, editor and publisher of the Chinese Weekly Review.

Writing in his magazine, Powell, who has lived here for 20 years and is one of the best-known journalists in the Far East, declared:

"The significance of Young's arrest lies in the fact that he probably knew more than anyone, with the possible exception of United States ambassador Joseph C. Grew, about international conditions affecting Japan.

"The two were close friends, and it is whispered in Tokyo that Jimmy's detention is a Japanese method of getting even with Grew.

"The foreign colony in Shanghai greatly admire Grew for the way he 'went to bat' for Jimmy.

"Jimmy undoubtedly was detained because he knew too much about the critical conditions prevailing in Japan on the eve of the expiration of the American-Japanese trade treaty.

Famous Voyage Of City Of Flint Brought To End

Vessel Is Being Docked At Baltimore Today After Fantastic Trip

CAPTURED EARLY BY NAZI CRUISER

Taken To Arctic Port—Finally Released By Norway —Gets Back To U. S.

(BULLETIN)
(International News Service)

BALTIMORE Jan. 27—America's "international incident"—a dinky, little freighter known as the City of Flint—came home today.

The ship arrived in the Baltimore harbor at 11 a. m., thus bringing to a close a four-months argosy virtually unparalled in American maritime history.

By HARVEY RIVKIN
International News Service Staff Correspondent

BALTIMORE, Md., Jan. 27.—A voyage as fantastic as the stories which came from the pen of Poe was nearing an end today as customs inspectors boarded the American freighter, City of Flint, at quarantine in the Patapsco river.

The "Flying Dutchman" which sailed the wide expanses of the storm-tossed Atlantic, wandering from port to port, now captive, now free, ended a modern saga of the sea with its skipper and crew of 40 hands in high spirits.

To unexcitable Captain Joe Gainard of Boston, veteran 50-year-old seaman, who has quelled a mutiny, seen a revolution in South America and participated in many Marine rescues, the voyage probably was just a trip to the Arctic Circle and back. But to his men, doubtless it was the "greatest adventure in their lives."

The 4,963-ton, weather-beaten freighter, which steamed through ice-choked Chesapeake Bay last night, will warp into pier 10 Canton Docks today.

Royal Welcome

A royal welcome awaits Gainard and his men. About 100 friends of the five Baltimoreans in the crew will have a brass band on hand.

Gov. James Attacks New Deal Measure

Second Blast In Two Days

Governor Assails Amendment Provision Of New Social Security Law In Address

MAKES SPEECH IN PHILADELPHIA

(International News Service)

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 27.—In a significant attack upon New Deal legislation, Gov. Arthur H. James charged today that the new social security law constitutes a potential menace to states' rights which is disturbing to "all the governors" of the nation.

The governor's second blast at the national administration in two days was directed at a hitherto unpublicized amendment to social security measures passed last summer. Previously, he had attacked alleged discrimination against WPA allotments for Pennsylvania.

Addresses C. Of C.

Addressing the annual Philadelphia chamber of commerce dinner, Governor James said the amendment sets up a merit system among personnel administering the act. It means, he said, that a "new political shotgun has been loaded and is mounted on the banks of the Potomac, where it may be pointed at the head of any state's chief executive."

"Under the construction placed upon it by certain employes of the national security board," declared the governor "this amendment gives the board the right to decide, arbitrarily and without court review or any other redress, the conditions under which any state is to receive its share of national funds allotted for relief purposes."

Hunt Technicalities

Governor James charged further that federal agents are investigating the personnel of Pennsylvania's unemployment compensation division for "technicalities" which might force calling of a special legislative session to revise civil service laws.

"The board itself has not yet signified its own intention in this matter," the chief executive emphasized. "Needless to say, I shall resist to the utmost any movement to bludgeon this state into changing a system which success has drawn commendation from the President himself."

SENATOR WHEELER NOW IN PICTURE AS POSSIBLE NOMINEE

indicated that John L. Lewis' CIO union might lean toward the Montanan's candidacy.

Furthermore, it was disclosed that the late Senator William E. Borah of Idaho would have deserted the Republican party for the first time to support Wheeler this year. William K. Hutchinson, chief of the Washington bureau of International News Service, printed the story, quoting Borah. Queried about it, Wheeler said in Columbus:

Wheeler Confirms

"I never would have mentioned it myself, but he (Borah) told it to me and to a number of other people."

On top of this, here in Washington, the veteran independent Senator George Norris said:

"If President Roosevelt isn't the Democratic candidate and Wheeler is, I'd support him. I think he's made a wonderful and fine record since he has been in the Senate and is fully qualified to be President."

The capitol hill rumor that Mr. Roosevelt was about to break his silence seemingly hinged on Senator Vic Donahey's conference at the White House Thursday. The Ohio senator is in a position to control his delegation to the Democratic national convention, and reports from congressional offices say he and the President discussed this matter. Donahey himself won't talk, and the President says they talked very little politics.

Before March 14

The Ohio primary falls on May 13 this year. Candidates for the Presidency must assent in writing to use of their names 60 days before that date, or by March 14. It is customary, however, to file in February to avoid confusion and permit more time for campaigning. Observers from the Buckeye state anticipate that Donahey will file as a favorite son candidate—but if Mr. Roosevelt should decide to run, his announcement also would have to be made at an early date.

Men closely associated with the President, however, while admitting they are not in his confidence on this score, continue to predict that his pronouncement on the subject of a third term will be withheld for some time. This group holds to the view Mr. Roosevelt wants to retire.

Foreign Purchasers Got $204,555,780 Worth Of War Materials In U. S. In Year

(International News Service)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27.—Foreign purchasers were granted licenses to buy $204,555,780 worth of aircraft, armament and other materials of war in the United States during 1939, the state department announced today.

This represented a huge increase over 1938 when only $83,000,000 worth of arms and munitions shipments were licensed by the government.

France was the principal purchaser in the American munitions market during the past year, receiving licenses covering $122,120,000. Of this amount, $85,519,000 was for aircraft.

Great Britain was second, receiving licenses for $20,991,000 during the year, of which $17,225,000 was for aircraft.

Other principal purchasers were Australia, $11,469,000; Canada, $6,001,398; Netherlands, $5,737,000, and China, $5,062,000.

Finland was granted $4,487,000 worth of licenses during year, $3,154,000 of which were issued in December. Approximately half of the Finnish licenses were for airplanes.

Actual exports lagged considerably behind the shipments authorized. During the year $102,298,000 worth of arms aircraft and munitions actually left the United States.

France took $38,000,000 of these exports and Great Britain $31,436,000.

Despite published reports of heavy British buying of American military goods, the English purchasing missions apparently are moving slowly in negotiating contracts.

In December, only $66,840 of armaments licenses were issued to Great Britain and actual exports to that nation during the month amounted to $4,184,000.

Arms exports to Finland for the year were slightly less than $347,000 and in December amounted to only $73,000.

Actual exports to other countries during 1938 included Argentina, $1,395,000; Australia, $1,873,000; Brazil, $1,829,000; Canada, $2,970,000; China, $2,012,000; Mexico, $3,025,000; Netherlands, $3,344,000; Netherlands Indies, $6,070,000, and Peru, $1,389,000.

There will be a lot of surprised church goers in New Castle churches on Sunday morning. As a part of the "Let's Go To Church" campaign opening there will be a general pulpit exchange in the city. Announcement has not been made as to which pastors will occupy pulpits so that the preacher tomorrow, at most services will be a surprise guest.

With Pennsylvania snowbound, there are no new highway contruction projects being started in the state, and the Detour Bulletin for the period ending February 9, remains unchanged. Motorists can well afford to heed the warning printed in big letters at the bottom of the bulletin, "Drive Carefully and Arrive Safely."

This morning a parcel post package weighing over 20 pounds was being mailed at the local post office to Italy. It is reported that, owing to the high prices and scarcity of food commodities in foreign countries, such commodities as coffee are being send to friends and relatives across "the pond". This brings in lots of added revenue to the Post Office Department.

But Lake Salon separates the three northern divisions from Lake Ladoga, and the big guns of Finland's Fort Mantsinsaari, on an island off the northeastern shore of Ladoga, cuts off the retreat of the division from Kitelae.

Report 1,000 Russians Killed

Yesterday alone, according to the Finns, 1,000 Red army men were killed, and Russian losses in the six-day campaign were placed high in the thousands.

Forty thousand more Russians continued their slow retreat on the highway east of Maerkaejaervi, on the Arctic front near Salla, and minor activity was reported by the Soviets on the extreme northern sector.

According to reports from Stockholm, Klementi Voroshilov, Soviet commissar for war, is visiting the Mannerheim front on the Carelian Isthmus. He is accompanied by Gen. B. M. Shaposhnikov of the Russian general staff and Gen. L. Z. Mechlis, head of the army's political section.

Dictator Josef Stalin, the reports said, has decided to put Voroshilov in personal command of the campaign, and to throw all available reserves against the Mannerheim defenses in a "final effort" to smash it.

FORMER KAISER IS 81 YEARS OF AGE

made for a greeting to the famous freighter, in recognition of the thrilling adventures experienced by ship and crew on the 113-day odyssey.

In the group on the dock will be Miss Cathleen Schurr, of Brooklyn, N. Y., who was among the Athenia survivors rescued last September 4 by the Flint. On the dawn of that day, cold and exhausted after nine hours in an open boat with other survivors, Miss Schurr, clambered aboard the Flint to safety.

The Athenia was the first important casualty to British shipping in the European warfare.

For the crew on the Flint, today was a red letter one—and they were set for a big weekend.

Lots of money jingled in their pockets. They were each given four months pay yesterday by officials of the United States lines, the Flint's owner, who boarded the ship off Norfolk. In addition, each member of the crew received a nice bonus for facing the perils of the war zone.

Odyssey Began

The odyssey of the freighter Flint began soon after the vessel left New York on Oct. 3. With a cargo of steel, tractors and fruit consigned to Liverpool. At the time congress was debating the neutrality act of 1939 which proposed a ban on American ships entering the war zone. On October 9, five days after the vessel had started what the crew expected to be a six-weeks trip, she was picked up by a German pocket-battleship, reportedly the Deutschland, in the Atlantic.

The Nazis placed a prize crew of 18 aboard, and transferred to the Flint 35 seaman captured when their warship sank the British freighter Stonegate.

For 15 days the prize crew navigated the Flint. All the while the world was kept in the dark as to her movements.

In Arctic Port

Then, on October 23, the Soviet government announced that the ship had sailed into the Arctic port of Murmansk. The Russians gave out scant news of the ship. Later it was learned that the Flint first had put in at Tromsoe, Norway, for repairs, but was ordered to leave because the Norwegians were fearful their neutrality would be violated.

On November 3, the Flint put into Haugesund, Norway, after attempting to break through the British blockade by following Norwegian waters to a German port. Norwegian officials promptly seized the prize crew for internment, set the British seamen free and gave the ship back to Captain Gainard.

Germany protested vigorously, but the complaint fell on deaf ears. Meanwhile, the United States neutrality act was passed, forbidding American ships to enter combat zones. The Flint would have to go through such zones to get home.

Two months passed before a plan was worked out. The Flint's cargo, which the Nazis had labelled contraband to justify her seizure, was discharged.

The Flint on January 7 picked up a cargo of ore at Bergen, Norway, and headed for home. But the voyage was not without incident. Maneuvering in the harbor the Flint collided with a British freighter and her sailing was delayed two days while repairs were made.

Gales beset the vessel in mid-Atlantic and when she finally reached Chesapeake Bay she had to battle her way through ice-choked waters as a grand finale to one of the strangest voyages ever made by an American ship.

WAR INTEREST IS FOCUSSING ON RUMANIA

blockade has put an end to this method of transit, and the oil that still goes to Germany has to be shipped by barges up the Danube and by rail.

Problem Faced

Difficulties of shipping have thus far held the supply of oil obtained by the Nazis from Rumania to comparatively low figures, but methods of handling are being improved and the Germans are now demanding a much larger share. By way of emphasizing their claim they may have negotiated an agreement with Red Russia to take over a slice of Russian Poland, or at least a corridor through it from the German border to Rumania.

German soldiers on the Rumanian border lend point and urgency of Nazi demands for a larger oil quota. Nobody in Rumania is likely to forget what the Germans did to that country in the World War. King Carol is reported to be all for giving the Germans all the oil they want.

But most of Rumania's oil wells are owned and operated by French and British capital. Operating companies do not want to see their oil go to the enemies of their nations. They have been refusing to sell to Germany, shipping their oil to allied and neutral customers.

Now they fear that the Rumanian government is about to take a hand and force them to increase greatly the quota going to the Nazis. The German attitude of late has been increasingly threatening. For that matter, the allies have been doing some threatening themselves.

May Reach Show-Down

In case the situation moves along to a show-down, there isn't much doubt as to what King Carol will do. Germany for him is by far the greatest threat. His sympathies are undoubtedly all with London and Paris, but his decision will have to represent at least a compromise with Berlin's demands if he wishes to avoid great and immediate danger.

All the world admires the manner in which Carol has thus far handled a situation so loaded with dynamite. He is between the allies and the Germans on the oil situation, and he hasn't a friend in Eastern Europe.

King Carol presents the appearance of a man in a cage with a lot of hungry and jealous lions. He has to distribute hunks of meat and pats on the head with strict impartiality. Not a pleasant situation, but at any rate they haven't eaten him yet.

PADEREWSKI'S RETURN

THOSE were difficult days, more than 20 years ago, when Ignace Jan Paderewski turned from the music that was his life to help in the establishment of his beloved Poland as an independent nation.

He accepted the premiership of the then new Polish republic. And, because they were difficult days and Paderewski was always given to a refreshing frankness, he candidly conceded that, as an expert in meeting the problems of government, he was a great pianist.

He quarreled with Marshal Josef Pilsudski, then quietly faded from politics in Poland.

Today, a Polish government which exists only as a myth—a fugitive in Paris—again has called its most famous son back to service. And Paderewski, bowed by 79 years of a useful but often troubled life, willingly responded to be installed as head of a Polish national council which is to sit in Paris for the duration of the present strife in Europe.

The hopes for a great and independent nation have been dashed by the action of Nazi Germany. If times were difficult 20 years ago when the eminent pianist was premier before, they are more difficult today. All the dreams of every Poland-loving man, woman and child have been turned into nightmares. For their land again is in chains.

But the spirit of Poland has not been destroyed. Everywhere in the world people who hate the tactics of aggressive dictatorships will thrill to the noble words of the aged pianist as he declares:

"Poland is immortal. We will deliver her from captivity and we will raise her from the ruins. We take this engagement before God!"

To Ignace Paderewski, and to all lovers of the free republic that was Poland's dream of 20 years ago, we wish Godspeed!

AGE DOES NOT WITHER IT

Those for whom life has begun—the 40-year-plus oldsters—find consolation in a California psychologist's report that their minds are not losing their sharpness. Dr. Frank H. Freeman gave a radio intelligence test and characterized the findings as "particularly encouraging to those who are nearing the twilight of their lives."

Ranging from 10 to 90 years old, 2331 persons took the quiz, and the participants over 40 were found to be slightly brighter than their juniors. Says Dr. Freeman:

"The results indicate that a person's intellectual capabilities do not decline after he is 40, if he uses those capabilities. The average person may show a little decrease in speed, perhaps, but in real intellectual accomplishments no substantial decline is indicated."

The report makes news because it is contrary to previous conclusions drawn by psychologists who maintain that there is a varying drop in some mental abilities after 45. Dr. Freeman admits that these earlier examinations were more exhaustive than his radio test, but nevertheless his findings warrant a questioning of the foregoing results.

It is noted the Freeman report carries the provision that mental alertness is conditioned by use of the capabilities. The mind, like the body's muscles, demands exercise if it is to remain in tip-top shape. So those who cannot retire from business or trade at 40 are perhaps just as well off to the end of nourishing that mass of gray matter in the cranium.

TRADE PACTS MAKING U. S. A SANTA CLAUS

George N. Peek, former head of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, makes a strong point in connection with the reciprocal trade agreements before the House Ways and Means Committee

If the program is extended by congress, then he declares it should have an amendment to suspend importation of any competitive farm product so long as the domestic price is below parity. This means a price that will give the farmer the same purchasing power he had in the five years before the World War.

This seems fair enough so far as the farmers are concerned. It is manifestly unjust to allow cheap foreign farm products to be dumped on the domestic market. It is especially illogical in view of the fact that at the same time the federal government is handing out hundreds of millions of dollars in "parity payments" to the farmers.

But if dumping of farm products through the trade pacts is to be prohibited, why not dumping of cheap manufactured products from abroad?

No one in Washington has ever cooked up a "parity" or other scheme to increase the purchasing power of industrial employers and wage-earners.

The farmers seem to have a valid grievance. But so do the multitude of workers in cotton and woolen textiles, shoes, lace, glassware, pottery and other industries.

A provision suspending imports of any commodity, whether agricultural or manufactured, contributing to lower wages or unemployment in this country, would cure the outstanding evil that has developed from these trade pacts while conserving any advantages they may possess in the direction of opening markets to our surplus products, says the Philadelphia Inquirer.

To use Mr. Peek's telling phrase, Uncle Sam cannot continue indefinitely to play Santa Claus to the rest of the world. It may not be necessary to abandon the entire trade pact program. But the need for its radical amendment is becoming clearer every day.

President of the Philippines thinks that country is at the crossroads And Japan is likely to see a green light there any time.

That anti-third term resolution up in congress may embarrass several Democrats and George Norris who voted against a third term for Cal Coolidge.

The Parent Problem

By Garry C. Myers, Ph. D.

MANY youths write me about problems they have with their parents. These youths generally think their parents wholly misunderstand them or are unduly strict. Judging from the letters, I often think so myself. But, as a rule, I hesitate to say so, especially in respect to standards, lest I do more harm than good.

In writing these youths I try to get them to put themselves, in their imagination, in their parents' places, remininding them that their parents keenly feel responsibility for their children, and that they have lived much longer and had more experience.

Let me say further to any youth who may be reading this: Try to look at these problems objectively. Imagine yourself standing off as an impartial observer, seeing both yourself and your parents.

No Good To Brood

If you think your parents misunderstand you, it will do no good to brood over the matter, let yourself cry or be abusive. Learn to manage your emotions. Wait for the time when you will be poised and your parents relaxed and calm. Then, in quiet and affectionate tones, courteously and respectfully tell one or both of them in what ways you believe they don't understand you. The better you can control yourself at this time, the better chances you will have to win them to your point of view.

Suppose, for instance, you believe that your parents are too strict in regard to your going out. Many boys and girls in their early teens have this belief, and some of them are wrong. Many a girl thinks she should go out unchaperoned much earlier than her parents allow her to do so.

Have Own Standards

If your parents are more strict in this respect than are parents of your friends, you should realize that your parents believe their own standards for you are correct. You certainly cannot afford to ignore their wishes and have dates on the sly, deceiving your parents—not if you are thinking of great happiness later.

If you will look far ahead—which is hard to do—you will conclude that your best course is to make the most of a hard situation and contrive ways to prevail upon your parents to relax some of their demands. And here is where you need to employ self-control, tact and psychology at their best. In some cases in which you are very sure your parents misunderstand you, and are unreasonable in their restraint of you, you might be able to change them by working on them indirectly through some other person who has your point of view but whose judgment they respect.

Prove You're Right

And when you do win concessions from your parents, spare no efforts to prove to them later that their confidence in you has not been misplaced. Be strict with yourself.

There's one precious fact I wish we might get over to all girls in their early teens. It is this: That boys whose friendship they cherish prefer, as a rule, the girl who comes from a home whose parents have been more strict with her than the average parent is.

And a tip to parents: Youths in their early teens often brag among their friends about how strict their parents are with them. And don't these same youths often brag about the strictness of a certain teacher they admire?

HINTS AND DINTS

Sun sets tonight 5:10. Sun rises tomorrow 7:14.

There are people who think six persons are enough for a court jury. Often twelve can do some funny things.

Lots of people like to talk and sing and they also want to have people hear them. That is why they talk and sing.

If things are not what they seem what are they?

TODAY'S STORYETTE

A nervous old gentleman, called in his physician to recite his ailments.

And what is your principal trouble?" asked the physician after the examination.

"Well doctor, I talk to myself a lot. My lips are continually moving and I say things.

The physician eyed him in a cheery manner and said: "That's not at all serious, my good man."

"I know doctor, but you don't realize what a tiresome fellow I am."

I heard a woman say yesterday that no man ever becomes so deaf he does not hear the rustle of a petticoat. And Old Timer rises to ask: "Will someone tell me what a petticoat is?"—Ezra.

There are thirteen candidates for the postmastership in Butler. Twelve of them will think thirteen is an unlucky number when it's all over.

There are times when the fool and his money are having a tough time getting together again.

Those accused Democrats in Harrisburg are making a big fight to keep from being tried. If they are innocent why not have it over with?

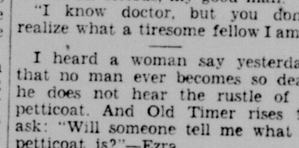
So this is what you call a war boom.

"What matters more than love?' a young man asked a middle-aged woman.

"Well," she replied "good teeth, a bank account and a comfortable pair of shoes matter a great deal more."

If a man makes big money these days he has to turn a half or more of it over to the government to help those who don't make any money. Maybe it's a good thing a few people can make money. Someone has to do it.

A political campaign's efforts to keep it's temper is almost as funny as a fat girl's effort to appear dignified in garden pajamas.



A man has no intuition He can spend hours with a group of ladies and still not know which one is mad at which.

DOMESTIC CARPENTRY

Asked how his brother happened to get married a Hillcrest youth said it was because of his forgetfulness.

"He forgot where he left his hammer, so he went over to her house to borrow one and she nailed him, is the way the brother explains it.

Mr. Dies, head of the Un-American investigation committee is having a hard time, even being threatened with a beating. And this from men who should be fighting him to help make America safe for Americans!

"What are the big questions of the hour?" roared the speaker.

"He doesn't need to tell them to us for we know them. What we want is the answers," growls the Office Grouch.

An Indian, fresh from the reservation with his pockets full of cash, reached New York and started out to find a place to live. An enthusiastic realtor tried to rent him a pent house. "On a clear day" said the realtor. "You can see all the way to New Jersey." "Ugh" grunted the Indian." "Me havum teepee in Oklahoma can see all way to damn moon."

SEVENTH HEAVEN

The college boy was gazing at himself in the mirror when his roommate came by.

"You must be pretty happy" said the roommate.

"I guess I'm happy enough" said the college boy. "But what makes you think I'm extra happy?"

"From the smile on your face when you looked in the mirror. I can see you are in love with yourself," said the roommate. "And after taking a look at your face I can see that you haven't got a rival in the world. Why shouldn't you be happy?"

There are 300 names for butterflies but none like the name a golfer called the wasp that stung him.

MEANT IT

"Did you get that meal from that house?" asked the first tramp.

"No, because the lady said there was a cord attached."

"You must mean a string."

"Cord I said. A cord of wood to be chopped."

Good Taste

One of my college boy correspondents thinks it rude because his classmates habitually refuse his proffered cigaretts with the statement: "No I always smoke So-and-So."

While I do think him hypersensitive, I might add for his comfort that if I were the other fellow I should accept his cigarette even if I were to take only a few puffs and then, slyly, lay it down. Another polite gesture would be the statement: "Thank you, but I don't care to smoke just now." I suspect that my correspondent has been victimized by some over-opinionated boors who flaunt their pereferences for certain brands event to the extent of affecting an abhorrence of others. Such audible comparisons are seldom heard among people beyond the student age.

Readers' Questions Answered

Dear Miss Markel: Is it ever permissable for a man to order dinner from a menu before his woman companion has given her order- I go to dinner frequently with an otherwise well-bred man who invariably gives his order first.—Kitty.

Answer: Your young man is either very absent-minded or rude—just which is for you to judge. Before expressing his own preference as to the items of the menu, he should consult you as to yours and give your order to the waiter along with his own. Failure to do this, he should at least allow you to give your order directly to the waiter before even mention his gustatory desires.

Miss Markel will promptly mail personal answers to questions from any reader encloising self-addressed three-cent stamped envelope.

COUNTRY DOCTOR

People who swore by tinctures, salves and pills.
Were seldom disappointed in the way
He ministered to their assorted ills.
Talking the hopful word he had to say
As much for granted as the golden oak

Grew up and married, yet the country folk
Trusted him with their troubles just the same.

Now, looking backward, one may smile a bit.
At cures that seemed so simple to achieve
But coughs would go and bones would always knit.
Such healing needs no Scripture to believe,

Navigation Bureau Taken To Task
Hopkins' Rebuke Is Not First One
Claim Maritime Regulations Loose

By CHARLES P. STEWART
(Central Press Columnist)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27.—Commerce Secretary Harry L. Hopkins recently called the bureau of navigation, which is one of the authorities under his cabinet departmental jurisdiction, sharply to account for laxity, he charged, in enforcing maritime regulations in the interest of safety on American craft afloat.

The National Maritime union, a labor body, previously had made a similar complaint. Uncle Sam's general accounting office also was critical of the bureau's efficiency, in its last annual report to the government. For some reason or other the accounting office's strictures were deleted from its report, as published. Subsequently, the justice department's committee on administrative procedure officially asserted that American shipowners have learned that "they may violate navigation laws practically with impunity."

The maritime union's, the accounting office's and the justice department committee's warnings weren't generally heeded when voiced, but Secretary Hopkins presently noticed them and evidently thinks they're worth attention.

All of which recalls an "incident."

Washington To Norfolk

There's a line of boats plying between Washington, D. C., and Norfolk, Va.—up and down the Potomac river and across Chesapeake bay. The trip, one way, is about 10 hours. Especially in summer it's a nice overnight cruise—cool, pleasant and not so crowded as a Pullman berth.

One evening, two or three years ago, a prominent Washington lawyer booked on one of these boats from the capital for the Virginia port.

We went aboard, had dinner in the dining salon, spent a couple of hours in the smoking room, visiting with fellow passengers, drank a bottle or so of beer, then repaired to his stateroom to rest. In the morning a steward tapped at his door, to tell him that the vessel was nearing Norfolk—that he'd have just time to get up, dress, have breakfast and disembark.

The World AND THE Mud Puddles

CITY ADVERTISING

It is a great advertisement for a city if it can hold every year some event within its boundaries that attracts people from all over the Nation. If that city has anything to sell to the people of North America, it certainly has its opportunity on that Day or that Week. In some instances it is better than World Fairs.

A million and one-half of people—and that is a very large number of people to be packed into the center of a city of seventy-five thousand—saw the Rose Parade in Pasadena, California, this year. It was, I believe, the twenty-first annual procession of flowers. It is so difficult for those who see this procession passing up the long stretch of Colorado Avenue to realize that there are no imitation flowers used in the making of these enormous Floats; that there may be twenty-five thousand roses, fifty thousand sweet peas and similar numbers of corn flowers and other flowers used in building these beautiful creations; so difficult to realize and when they are persuaded that such is the case, they go back home and their auditors are so skeptical that the auditors themselves have to come and see. And that is where Pasadena wins.

There used to be a somewhat similar celebration in Baltimore. A procession of elaborate Floats passed through the streets of Baltimore during the week of the "Veiled Prophets" Meeting. I do not know what happened to this. It is seen no more.

However, New Orleans still maintains its week of the Mardi Gras and those who enter into the spirit of the Mardi Gras are fortunate to be guests of worthwhile New Orleans folk during that week, will never forget it as long as they live. And that reminds me of a story of the Mardi Gras.

A woman, whose imagination evidently did not measure up to the French origin of New Orleans and who did not quite understand the significance of the words "Mardi Gras" had her imagination kindled when she saw the long strings of moss hanging from the trees in and about New Orleans.

"Why!" she exclaimed, "Now I understand what kind of "grass" it is they are celebrating."

AGAINST THE ODDS

The fight worth winning is the one
That's made when hope seems wholly gone.
When safety-seekers run away.
It calls for courage rare to stay;
Against the heavy odds to stand
And gain the victory single-hand!

When one has numbers on his side,
In triumph there is little pride;
When might removes the dangers grave,
The giant's never very brave.
At six to one on land or sea,
Paltry the conquest's bound to be.

Against the odds, to stand and fight!
Alone to battle for the right!
Alone to brave the giant's will.
This calls for courage and for skill.
Only earth's bravest carry on
With odds against them six to one.

Those British Notes

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27. UNQUESTIONABLY the State Department is on sound ground in sharply calling the British attention to the holding up of American ships in the Mediterranean and in the opening of and diversion of mail. It is necessary that the protest be made and it is better that the State Department make it voluntarily than that complaints should pile up and a demand for action arise.

NEVERTHELESS, there is no reason for any public feeling on the subject and nothing like the indignation is felt inside the State Department that the sternness of its protesting language would indicate. Actually, it is recognized that the British are within their legal rights in delaying and searching American ships bound for neutral ports with mail and cargo. The only real grievance is not what they have done, but the way in which they have done it.

ASIDE from the chronic British baiters in Congress, no one here is inflamed against England because of these happenings. Nor do informed persons take them seriously. The effect which the notes will have—and which it was designed they should have—is to make the British use more tact and more care in dealing with American vessels and observing American rights. So far as the opening of the mails is concerned, as Mr. Arthur Krock points out, the mails are "inviolable under one letter of The Hague conventions, but if they contain contraband, are not inviolable under another."

THE only way in which the British can find out whether the mails are carrying money or valuables destined for Germany is to open them. This they have done and, according to their Foreign Office, have found plenty—money orders, jewels, cash and negotiable warrants, which certainly would find their way into Germany through the neutral countries and be used by Germany to prosecute the war she has started and which threatens to engulf the world.

THIS is a desperate and titanic struggle in which every civilized nation no matter how neutral has a vital stake. So far as England is concerned, she is fighting for her life. The sort of warfare being made against her under the sea threatens her very existence. Her chief hope of winning the war and securing a peace that will not be ignominious and intolerable is in making the blockade against Germany effective. That can only be done by shutting off every channel by which supplies, whether of goods or money, can reach her. In this war England is exerting every ounce of strength she has. She can afford to overlook nothing; neglect nothing. Defeat would be catastrophic for her in the last degree. Nor are the consequences of such a defeat to us pleasant to contemplate. The sympathies and interests of this country are bound up in the success of the Allies. By no one has this been made plainer than by the President and his Secretary of State, Mr. Hull.

OUR neutrality is a surface neutrality and practically we are in the war on the Allied side, with everything "short of soldiers." Under the circumstances great indignation over the opening of mail and the searching of ships by the English in their effort to make the blockade complete is slightly ridiculous. It is all right for the record to make the protest and the British ought, perhaps, to do these things with more thought of our surface position.

BUT to magnify them into an important incident is not possible without a great deal of strain. Nor does it make sense to charge that the British are "discriminating" against American vessels purposely and unnecessarily delaying them longer than, for example, Italian vessels. Why? There isn't any answer to that. The British have every possible motive for cultivating American good will and retaining American sympathy in this struggle. It would be inconceivably stupid unnecessarily to discriminate against or annoy American vessels.

NO one really believes the British are that stupid. These State Department notes are normal, natural and necessary for the record. But there is no real heat behind them. In effect, they notify the British to give rise to as little complaint as possible from American ship owners and passengers bound to neutral ports. And the British will do that, but they will not stop searching these vessels for contraband which can get into Germany. Nor should they.

Pulpit Exchange Starts 'Let's Go To Church' Campaign

Open Letter To Local Churches

Chairman Heaton Calls All Faiths To Unite In "Let's Go To Church" Campaign

CAMPAIGN WILL BEGIN TOMORROW

Ministerial Association Is Sponsor; City-Wide Pulpit Exchange Tomorrow

Rev. Charles H. Heaton, D. D., pastor of the First Baptist church, and chairman of the New Castle Ministerial Association committee in charge of a city-wide "let's go to church" campaign which will be participated in by people of all religious faiths, has written an open letter to the churches, which is appended. The campaign opens tomorrow with a general pulpit exchange, and will continue to Easter Sunday, March 24.

Dear Friends:

The spirit of Godlessness has already fastened its deadly grip upon millions of our fellowmen. The moral and spiritual foundations of civilization are fast subsiding. In the world there is distress of nations with perplexity, and everywhere men's hearts are failing them for fear and for looking after those things that are to come upon the earth. Every community is affected, including our own. The greatest need of mankind is a spiritual recovery. These propositions are so obvious that they need no argument to sustain them.

To meet the crucial hour the Ministerial Association of New Castle has planned a "let's go to church" campaign. It begins tomorrow and lasts until Easter Sunday. Among many of the pastors there will be a general exchange of pulpits tomorrow and each guest preacher will urge the values of church attendance as a means of grace the fruits of which are a Godly life.

All Faiths Will Unite

In this campaign all faiths will unite. The effort will not be in any sense competitive, but will be in every sense cooperative. There will be no effort to build one congregation at the expense of another. It is not an evangelistic campaign, although each church may carry on its own work at the same time in its own way.

Careful records will be kept of (1) the total church attendance on Sunday, (2) the percentage of church members in attendance each Sunday, (3) the percentage of church officers in attendance each Sunday, (4) the percentage of Sunday school members in attendance at church each Sunday, (5) the percentage of Sunday school teachers and officers in attendance at church each Sunday. Each pastor is asked to report to me on these five points each Monday morning.

At the end of the campaign each church is asked to report the total number of persons who have attended church services during the whole period, including Sunday and week-day services. This applies only to services of the church for worship.

Wishing you all joy in your service and an abundant reward for your effort, I am

The Committee Chairman,
C. H. HEATON.

Sunday School Campaign Opens On February 4

"Loyalty" Pre-Easter Increase Campaign Starts One Week From Sunday

The "Loyalty" Pre-Easter Increase campaign sponsored by the Lawrence County Sabbath School Association, will start Sunday, February 4 and continue for the eight Sundays to and including Easter Sunday.

The sixteen Sunday Schools in New Castle that participated in the four groups in last year's campaign, have either enrolled and sent in their average attendance for the year 1939, or have made arrangements to do so in the near future. The Sunday Schools in the districts outside of New Castle—and there were a total of 65 Sunday Schools participating last year—are being organized by the district presidents and their average attendance figures will be furnished before the start of the campaign.

In previous Pre-Easter campaigns put on by the county association, every one over the average in attendance of the previous year was counted a point. This plan will be used this year and will be supplemented by the slogan, "Beat 1939 attendance in 1940". As the figures are on hand for every Sunday of last year's campaign, this year's corresponding attendance figure will be compared with last year. Every one in attendance over last year's attendance, will also be counted as a point and the names of the Sunday Schools having gains in 1940 over last year, will be published in the paper.

Every Sunday of the campaign will have a special designation. The first will be "opening Sunday of Campaign"; the second, "Bring a Friend" Sunday; the third, "New Members Sunday"; the fourth, "Beat 1939 Attendance Sunday"; the fifth, "Stay to Church Sunday"; the sixth, "Every Church member in Sunday School" Sunday; the seventh, "100 per cent enrollment" Sunday and the last or Easter Sunday, "Every One Out" Sunday.

I. C. C. Against Canal Project

Report Is Made On Study Conducted At Request Of President Roosevelt

(International News Service)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27.—The interstate commerce commission today had placed itself, in effect, on record against construction of the proposed Lake Erie-Ohio river canal.

Its findings were contained in a 68-page report, drawn up at the request of President Roosevelt, in which the I. C. C. said that there was no need for the canal as far as freight transportation was concerned.

In addition to railroads, motor carriers in a limited area would to some extent be adversely affected by the waterway's construction, the report held.

It stated that the railroads "have ample time and terminal capacity to carry any traffic that is likely to develop" in the area "for many years to come."

Study Made At President's Request

On Feb. 16, 1939 President Roosevelt asked the commission to make a study of certain aspects of the proposed canal, including the effect it would have on railroads serving the district.

The president said he had been informed by the board of engineers for rivers and harbors that "if the railroads would permanently reduce rates by an average of 29 cents a ton prior to construction of the canal, the project would not be justified."

Such rates "would not be economically justified," the ICC said in its report, which stated:

"Permanent rate reductions of the type and magnitude specified in the inquiry directed to us would not be economically justified prior to the construction of the canal for the reason that on the information now available, these reductions could not be confined to the traffic of those who would be expected immediately and directly to benefit by construction of the proposed waterway."

DIPLOMAS ARE GIVEN TO MID-YEAR CLASS OF SENIOR HIGH FRIDAY

they need but not as much as they want, and I hope they do climb to central thrones of authority, and yet get no more power than they can wisely administer."

Dr. Williams spoke of the great power that has fallen into the hands of one man in Europe—the power to "plunge again this world into the darkness of war"—and he pointed to it as a fine illustration of misdirected power.

"If there's any collapse worse than a collapse in character," the educator said, "I don't know of it."

The Ohio college head, introduced to the audience by Superintendent of Schools C. C. Green, held the attention of the large audience for a long period of time.

Seated before him in the center block of the main floor were the seniors, with whom he had chosen to attach himself as "the 211th" in his inspiring address.

Program of Evening

James Hewitt, president of the senior group, presided over the commencement as chairman.

Early in the program came a clarinet solo, "Rigoletto", by Verdi-Bassi, played by Anthony Buonpane, winner of the night's music award. He was accompanied at the piano by Jean Wright.

Following that the speaker was introduced. After Dr. Williams speaking the customary honor awards, bestowed at each commencement upon outstanding graduates, were made. Representatives of clubs and local business organizations made the presentations.

Superintendent of Schools Green addressed the graduates and the public briefly after awards were distributed. He had the highest of praise for the graduating group.

Then, presenting President Daniel B. Woolcock of the board of education, Dr. Green reported that the class had successfully completed its required studies and was ready for diplomas.

The board president briefly addressed the class and then the class filed out slowly and moved onto and across the wide stage to receive its graduation certificates from Mr. Woolcock.

The invocation and benediction at the service were given by Rev. J. Calvin Rose, pastor of the Second U. P. church. The senior high school orchestra played for the entrance and exit march for the graduates.

Unemployment Is No. 1 Problem Of U. S. Says Wheeler In Columbus

(International News Service)

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 27 —U. S. Senator Burton K. Weeler, Montana Democrat, on Friday afternoon followed up his plea that President Roosevelt break his silence on the third term issue with a formal address in which he ranked unemployment above foreign affairs as America's No. 1 problem.

Actually Senator Wheeler's address before the United Mine Workers convention came as an anti-climax to an informal press conference in which he deplored the "chaotic condition" in the Democratic party resulting from Mr. Roosevelt's continued muteness concerning a third term. Personally opposed to such an extension of tenure, Wheeler nevertheless said that as a Democrat he would support the president if he were renominated.

Should Break Silence

He insisted, however, that the White House silence should be broken — that "if the president wants the nomination, he will get it, but if he wants it he should say so."

In his formal address, Senator Wheeler called for unity of industrial, agricultural and labor leaders to facilitate a program by which industrial democracy and economic and social security may be achieved.

"It should be clear to all," he said, "that if the United States permits itself to become engaged in the wars of Europe and Asia, there will be a blackout of American institutions — and possibly of democracy itself.

Ignores Boomlet

The Montana Liberal Democrat ignored the boomlet launched in his behalf as a Democratic presidential possibility. Likewise, he ignored the implication that as the only national political figure invited to address the U. M. W. convention, he might expect support for the nomination from that important labor group whose leader John L. Lewis, has broken openly with President Roosevelt and other Democrats mentioned as presidential timber.

Wheeler's only reference to his own political future was to reiterate that as a candidate for re-election to the senate in 1940 he pledged never to vote to send an American boy across the water to fight on foreign soil.

What's What At A Glance

knocks, the steward finally peeked in. The stateroom was empty. The lawyer's raiment was scattered about, indicating that he hadn't gone on deck. The stateroom's porthole was open, suggesting that the traveler might have gone out that way. But why? If he'd done so, it followed that he must have drowned. Yet the idea that he'd committed suicide appeared ridiculous. He was prosperous, in good health, respected, had seemed perfectly normal in the smoking room the night before.

Sherlocks Holmes Mystery

The question was raised, "Hadn't somebody snopped in and 'croaked' him, then shoved his remains out through that open port?"

That mystery was never solved.

The Washington police naturally were interested, since the traveler had embarked from their jurisdiction. The Virginia police equally were concerned, since he'd intended to get off at their end of the line. Yet there was the possibility that the tragedy had occurred in Maryland waters; so the Free State coppers were all by the ears. It was an interstate matter likewise, dragging the G-men in.

And the bureau of navigation? That was right "under the gun."

These groups combined. All their best sleuths collaborated.

They had just one hint at a clue. The stateroom adjoining the missing man's had been occupied by a woman. If there'd been a distubaace in a cabin adjoining her own, it seemed as if she'd have heard it, with only the thin partition between the two.

Another Mystery

The sleuths knew her name; she'd registered with the purser. But her address? That was a puzzle. They looked high, low, everywhere. No good.

At last they held a conference at the navigation bureau's headquarters in the Commerce building.

At the beginning of this confab a woman appeared. "I'm Mrs. So-and-So," she said, referring to the missing woman. "I see by the papers that you're looking for me."

"Good gosh!" cried the investigators. "We've looked everywhere."

"Did you look," asked the woman, "in the telephone book or the city directory?"

No, the woman didn't solve the problem. It would have been a wonderful mystery solution if she had.

Wearing Fur Coats Down In Florida Is Report Brought Here

New Castle Residents Report Unusual Weather Conditions Prevail In South

Fur coats are the vogue in Florida according to Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Gwin, Chestnut street, Mrs. Earl Bishop and son, James, Maryland avenue, and Mrs. Lawrence Gibson, Winslow avenue, who returned home Thursday night from a trip to that state.

They report that the chill wind in St. Petersburg made fur coats practically a necessity. Flowers and plants were covered with sheets both day and night and at Lake Wales, smudge pots were kept burning in the groves to protect the fruit.

Enroute home, the local party made an overnight stop just outside Augusta, Ga., and in the morning the ground was covered with snow, the first in 30 years. The next night, they stayed at a tourist home near Madison, N. C., and had to shovel snow a foot deep before they could get their car out of the garage in the morning.

In all, the local residents drove 3,248 miles and the only warm place they could find was Miami, Fla., they report.

Dr. Dafoe's Column On The Quintuplets And The Care Of Your Children

(Copyright, 1940, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Diagnosis of congenital dislocation of the hip in early childhood is extremely important. I think that was made clear when I told here some days ago what success we had in clearing up the hip malformation with which one of the Quintuplets, Annette, was born. If we hadn't discovered the defect until she began walking, she might have had a bad limp today.

Unless it is discovered that the hip is not fully formed before the child begins to walk, the child's first steps will cause further malformation. Early diagnosis isn't easy. Even when the child does start to walk, it is naturally unsteady at first, and so the symptoms of a malformed hip may be overlooked until the child has been walking for some time. The abnormally small socket and the undeveloped head of the thigh bone change in shape and position with the strain imposed by walking and so the condition becomes increasingly difficult to remedy.

Annette, born two months prematurely, had rickets, as did all five of the little girls. Until those rickets were completely cured we didn't let any of the babies stand or put their weight on their legs. I think they were five months old before any of them were allowed to stand, and we kept Annette off her feet longer than that to give that bad hip a chance to become normal.

Naturally, when we discovered Annette's malformation, we went very carefully over the others to see if they had any similar afflictions. But not one of them had.

We were lucky in the case of Annette, for generally speaking even under the best of circumstances and even when the diagnosis is made quite early, the treatment for congenital hip dislocation is long and severe. If the child has a full fledged case of this faulty bone formation we may expect the treatment to require for the hip to remain in a cast at least eight months before any walking is done. If the condition passes unnoticed until the child has been walking a short time it will take a much longer time before we can expect the proper results.

The treatment consists of placing the child under an anaesthetic and manipulating the hip until the surgeon feels the hip bone slip into place. The hip will stay in place while the legs are spread apart, so they are put into a cast with the legs spread as far as possible. At intervals of about three weeks the cast is taken off and renewed and each time the legs are brought a little closer together.

Even when the child can lie with legs together without dislocation, he must be kept off his feet for a long time. For if full strength has not come to the tissues that form the joint, dislocation will occur again.

In cases where the child has walked for a long time before the deformity is noticed, a serious operation is often necessary.

DAILY DOZEN

(From the Medical Society of the State of Pennsylvania)

The busy business man should learn to relax and live longer.

Heart disease kills more people under 70 than over that age.

These figures should be reversed.

There has been a reduction in heart deaths among the young.

Due largely, to decrease in infectious diseases.

Youthful diseases may cripple the heart.

How can heart disease be further reduced?

Breeding from sturdy, long-lived ancestral stock is one way.

Good nutrition in childhood helps the heart.

So does exercise and avoidance of obesity in middle life.

Protect against continuous and excessive nervous strain.

The pace isn't worth the price—heart disease.

Charge Threats Of Reprisals By Administration

Republican Members Of House Committee At Hearing On Trade Agreements Aroused

(International News Service)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27—Republican members of the House Ways and Means Committee on Friday accused the administration of "threatening reprisals" against manufacturers who wanted to testify in opposition to extension of reciprocal trade agreements and of "trying to put this program across despite evidence against it."

The outburst came while J. W. Wells of East Liverpool, representing the United States Potters Association was on the stand testifying against extension of the agreements.

Rep. Robertson (D) of Virginia, questioned Wells about statements he had made before the tariff commission some years ago, which Robertson said were different from his statements today. At this point Rep. Jenkins (R) of Ohio, broke in.

"Many manufacturers have not testified on the reciprocal trade agreements because they are afraid of reprisals," he shouted. "Every witness is confronted with this situation. I never before have seen such vicious attacks on witnesses."

Boro About Ready To Ask Annexation

South New Castle Boro Seeks To Become A Part Of The City Of New Castle

Providing the council of South New Castle Boro approves the idea and passes necessary ordinances, it is likely that the council of the City of New Castle will be presented with a request that the boro be annexed, within a short time.

Sometime ago the matter of annexation was broached in the boro and several meetings called A group of citizens decided to push the idea and they now have about 140 signatures to the petition. All other necessary legal steps have been taken and shortly the idea will be presented to the boro council with the request that it pass enabling ordinances.

In order to have the boro annexed to the city it would be necessary for city council to pass similar ordinances before the boro would be a part of the city.

If such steps are taken, it would add a considerable area to the city and would add approximately 1100 citizens to the city's population.

Relief In Pennsylvania Has Become Big Business

By RAYMOND WILCOVE
International News Service Staff Correspondent

HARRISBURG, Jan. 27.—Relief in Pennsylvania today is big business!

There is no other service the state is engaged in which is as costly, as extensive in its scope, or as difficult to adminster.

The problem of raising sufficient funds with which to meet the increasing demands of unemployed and poverty-stricken citizens today has become the greatest problem facing the state.

Pennsylvania's relief system is probably unique in the nation in that it is the only state which has concentrated in its own hands the entire cost of relief.

In consequence it has given Pennsylvania what is probably the most effective state relief system in the nation, one which is the envy of social workers throughout the country. But it has been costly, more costly than that of any other state in the union with the exception of New York where the state bears but 60 per cent of the cost of relief.

Cost $190,330,000 in 1939

Last year Pennsylvania's relief burden cost the state $130,330,000, the greatest amount in its history and there is no indication of where it will end.

And yet, only 10 short years ago, the problem did not even exist. The turn of the last decade gave no clue to the full effect of the end of the boom period. Relief needs in 1930 continued to be taken care of largely by private means.

But with 1931 came a change that was to excite economists and sociologists throughout the nation before the decade had ended and in Pennsylvania, a highly industrialized state hard hit by the depression, the change was startling.

Beginning To Aid

Nineteen thirty one saw the beginning of a thin trickle of state funds expended for relief purposes. It totaled only $1,610,000 and went almost unnoticed.

Before the decade was ended it was to increase by leaps and bounds doubling, tripling, quadrupling, until it had grown almost 130 times. The expenditure which totaled only $1,610,000 in 1931 had grown in 1939 to $130,330,000.

The increase in the cost of relief to the state has been steady with but two exceptions, 1934 and 1937, when it decreased slightly.

In 1932, the cost of relief rose from $1,610,000 to $16,310,000. It more than doubled the following year, reaching $37,495,000 in 1933. In 1934 it fell to $34,335,000, a decrease which was short-lived, for it rose the following year to $53,421,000, rising again in 1936 to $35,300,000. A slight drop the following year to $80,094,000 was following in 1938, when the state took over all relief by a sharp increase, the figure passing the $100,000,000 mark for the first time to reach $109,654,000. In 1939 it increased again to an all time record of $130,330,000.

On Court House Hill

REALTY TRANSFERS

William G. Greer to Abraham T. Jennings, Fourth ward, $1.

Hugh M. Stevenson to Arthur Brenneman, Plaingrove township, $1.

George W. Lusk to William Q. Sword, Second ward, $50.

H. O. L. C. to Harold Minner, Shenango township, $2700.

Sebastiano Colello to George T. Weingartner, Fifth ward, $1.

For one day during the week of February 11, the court house will be officered by Boy Scouts. A scout will be named to every post in the building and for one day they will get the experience of working the job that perhaps someday they may hold in their own right.

John Finnessy, executive director of the Boy Scouts was in the court house Friday and interviewed every elected officer. All of them were glad to co-operate and granted permission readily.

For the purpose of checking information on a group of naturalization applications two examiners of the Federal government were in the court house Friday. It was not a regular examination, merely a check-up of some minor defects on a comparatively few applications.

If the equipment for the prothonotary's new office were here the court house addition would soon be ready for use. The barricades which have separated the old office from the new have been taken down, plasterers are finishing the area around the openings and the painting has been about completed.

The addition will give the prothonotary a lot of much needed space. At the present time he has but two rooms in which to work and store records. Thousands of records are in the basement and the belfry. The new arrangement adds one large room to his working space and also gives hime a basement room and two other small storage rooms in which to store records.

All of the rooms are as, nearly fireproof as it is possible to make them. With the new rooms in use the prothonotary's office will be adequate for years to come. Recently the indexing was brought up to date and this also will serve for many years.

Rose Dombrosky administrator in the estate of the late Edward Dombrowski has filed a suit to collect $1000 insurance from the International Workers' Order, Inc., which was issued to Ignace Dombroski who named Edward Dombrowski as the beneficiary.

Edward Dombrowski was a nephew of Ignace Dombrowski. On July 31, 1939 the two men were found beside an automobile in the Hog Hollow district, dead. Each had several bullets in him and the conclusion of the authorities at the time was that it was a murder and suicide.

Rose Dombrowski is the widow of Edward Dombrowski and is the administrator of his estate. She claims the face of the policy but the matter of which man died first enters into the issue. There were no known eye witnesses to the double death, and when found both of them were dead.

Ralph W. Cunningham files a suit against Clarence J. Semple and Lloyd W. McConnell an amicable action in ejectment.

Judge Thomas W. Dickey handed down an opinion on Friday sustaining a recent verdict in the case of Paul Lewis and Mary Lewis against Glenn Berry, executor in the estate of William S. Lewis. The plaintiffs brought suit to recover $4,236.61 from the estate of the deceased man, alleging that they had loaned him $4,500 securing the money by mortgaging some property.

While there was no note to be found the plaintiffs offered testimony of bank officials to prove that the money in question was secured by them and turned over to William S. Lewis' account in the bank. They refused a motion for judgment N. O. V. and also a motion for a new trial.

Breweries Pay Fines Rather Than Take Suspensions

Fines Totaling $5,600 Paid To State By Erring Breweries Of Pennsylvania

(International News Service)

HARRISBURG, Jan. 27. — Six Pennsylvania breweries Friday paid an aggregate of $5,600 in compromise fines rather than shut down under a liquor board suspension order.

Three of the companies were Pittsburgh breweries, including the Duquesne, Pittsburgh, and Fort Pitt brewing firms. The other three were the Fuhrmann and Schmidt Brewing Company, Shamokin; Leibert and Obert Brewery, Philadelphia; and Lebanon Valley Brewing Company, Lebanon.

Five other breweries were suspended Thursday for violation of the "trade practice" provisions of the malt beverage law. Unless they make compromise offers to the liquor control board they must shut down on Monday.

The Duquesne Brewing Company, suspended for five days on each of three brewery licenses, decided to comply with the board's $100 per day compromise offer and paid a $1,500 fine.

The Pittsburgh Brewing Company, under suspension of two days on each of three licenses, paid a $600 fine, while the Fort Pitt company agreed to pay a $500 fine for a five-day suspension.

The largest fine was paid by the Leibert and Obert Brewing Company. The company paid $2,000 rather than shut down for 20 days. The Lebanon Valley and Fuhrmann-Schmidt breweries paid $500 fines each.

EGG PRODUCTION RECORDS ON HOUSING CONDITIONS

Housing conditions play an important part in egg production during extremely cold weather. They may bring about slumps in egg production because they fail to help the fowl to adjust herself to sudden changes in outdoor temperature.

Often houses are as cold as outdoors and then the birds must do something to protect themselves if they are to survive. Body maintenance becomes of first importance and egg production secondary. Often the reaction to severe cold by birds producing heavily is too abrupt and mortality results because of the changes which take place in the bodies of the birds in meeting these extremes.

Tightness of walls, roof and floor a ventilation system that works are essential to proper house construction.

Exposure and air drainage will determine the effects of the elements as they strike the spot where the fowls are housed.

Ventilation has much to do with the condition of the litter, moisture content of the air and the general health of the flock. A deep layer of litter of the "built-up" type helps keep a house warmer because it insulates the floor. Restricting ventilation helps conserve the natural heat from the bodies of the birds, removes excess moisture, and helps maintain a drier litter condition.

Insulation may be necessary in some cases and valuable in others, depending on location and exposure. A poultryman, in studying his poultry housing problems, should try to determine whether he will need an insulated roof and wall in addition to restricted ventilation and litter insulation.

When housing conditions are satisfactory and the right feeds are fed, slumps in production can be minimized or averted entirely.

HOUSE PLANT CULTURE QUESTIONS ANSWERED

Many questions arise from time to time regarding the culture of house plants. The following questions are ones frequently asked.

Q. Why do fern leaves turn yellow and drop?

A. High temperatures and a dry atmosphere may be to blame. Other possible causes are lack of water, gaseous odors, poor drainage and insect attacks.

Q. Should pots be placed in jardinieres?

A. Ordinary house temperatures are too hot and dry for many house plants. Setting the pots in jardinieres often lowers the rate at which the soil dries. Never permit water to accumulate in the base of the jardinieres. This largely can be prevented by placing sand or paper in the bottom.

Q. Can poinsettias be kept from year to year?

A. Yes! After poinsettias finish blooming, leave them in the pots and turn on their sides for drying. Store in the coolest part of the cellar. About the middle of April, cut back the plants, repot in good soil, and place them where growing conditions are good. Keep them in a sheltered spot until late summer and then take them indoors. With satisfactory growing conditions, they should flower profusely.

Q. How can I make my ivy grow indoors?

A. Most ivies will succeed with less care than other house plants. Always avoid unsatisfactory drainage, poor light, dry atmospheric conditions and high temperatures.

Q. What are some of the more desirable, so-called foolproof house plants?

A. English Ivy, Boston Ferns, Wandering Jew, Rubber Plant, Paper White Narcissus, Asparagus Sprengeri, Christmas Cactus, Kentia Palm, Aspidistra, Chatelain Begonia, and Impatiens.

Q. How can I make house plant cuttings?

A. Cuttings ordinarily are made with the aid of a sharp instrument, such as a discarded razor blade or sharp knife, the cut being made at the base just below a joint or node. The lower leaves are removed and the cutting set in clean sand firmed compactly. Water is applied to keep the sand moist but not waterlogged.

Q. Will some plants grow better in steam, air, oil, hot air or hot water heat?

A. When the temperature is properly regulated, source or type of heat is not very important.

RECORDS TELL WHERE FAMILY MONEY GOES

No one can tell you where your money is going. All that an outsider can do is to suggest some ways and means of learning how to keep track of where it is going, says Miss Julia Markle, home economics representative, of Lawrence county.

Benjamin Franklin said, "If you know how to spend less than you get, you have the philosopher's stone". Many homemakers are seeking the philosopher's stone today. There seems no better guide than to keep records and plan expenditures.

How does one become acquainted with this guide? First, by holding a family council so that all members of the family may share in making the acquaintance. Second, obtain a record book. This may be secured from the Agricultural Extension Service, at the Pennsylvania State college. Some banks and insurance companies have them, and most stationery departments in stores carry record books. Third, decide upon a definite time and place to keep the records.

Some values that come from having records of expenditures are:

1. Information of actual payments for different items is a guide in future buying to get the largest returns from available income.
2. This information forms a basis for the budget for the next week, month, or year.
3. Develops and establishes desirable habits of expenditures.
4. Permanent records have proved valuable in insurance adjustments.
5. Records show up many unnecessary expenditures. A 10 cent purchase may prove more expensive than a dollar one. A piece of equipment if used but once a year though costing only a dime, is more expensive than the dollar purchase used every day. This offers a challenge to buyers to see that they are meeting their needs with the best for the money expended.
6. Records show how expenditures are proportioned. For effective record keeping, the expenditures must be classified and summarized. This is not a difficult task if the records are kept in a form early for summarizing.

It is well to consider these factors when you plan your budget, explains Miss Markle.

(1. Keep permanent records in a form easy to use and one that will tell the story. (2) Have a definite time and place for recording. (3) Make the items clear but without too much detail. (4) Make daily entries and keep book up-to-date. (5) Work for the cooperation of all members of the family.

Keeping a record of all materials or devices given by the farm, garden and family is important, and a great contribution to the income lies hidden in these services.

Suggests Change In Contracting For Warship Building

Secretary Edison Would Build Ships By Negotiated Contracts Instead Of Lowest Bid

(International News Service)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27 — Secretary of the Navy Edison today declared the government is forced to waste millions of dollars in warship construction because of the insistence of congress that building contracts must be awarded to the lowest bidder.

The secretary said he would fight for substitution of a system whereby the navy would be authorized to obtain ships through so-called negotiated contracts. Edison explained that a modern battleship is virtually a floating city representing the most advanced equipment of a thousand and one types.

By being forced to proceed on the low bid principle, he said, one private shipyard may furnish a certain type of equipment for the vessel, while another yard building a similar boat might have different equipment. A government navy yard building a third vessel of the same type, possibly would also contain a different technical apparatus, thus there is no standardization, according to the secretary.

He noted that the British Admiralty builds warships through negotiated contract system and added that this method is the only way to build up the national defense.

Washington Hi Trips Franklin

Score Is 34 To 19 In Junior High Game Friday At Washington Hi Gym

NORTH HILLERS CLOSE TO TITLE

George Washington junior high was a bedlam late yesterday afternoon as the Washington high varsity team hung a 34 to 19 defeat on the necks of the Franklin high team from the east side in an important junior high league game. The victory gives the north hill team the edge in the current series. The teams will meet again later in the year at the Franklin high floor.

The Washington high team started out strong, and at the half had a lead of 16 to 5. The North Hillers with Burris, Lee and Gunn piling in points, proved too hot for the rivals from the east side.

Lee-Fraser Stars

Lee, besides making 10 of the Washington points, played a great defensive game, as did Fraser for the losers. DeLillio was the best Franklin high scorer.

The Washington team outscored the Franklins, 18 to 14, in the final half.

A packed gym greeted the two teams yesterday with a lot of current interest in the game.

With Bombyk and Lauro gone it will require a couple of new faces to make up the starting varsity. Christopher and Bucci will handle the guard jobs. There is a possibility that Adamo will be at center. Gennock and Eddie Cowden are fixtures at the forwards.

Little is known of the strength of the South High team. They have won quite a lot of games this year. They will lose but one man by midyear graduation.

The same prices will prevail for the game tonight as do for the other games. Next Tuesday New Castle will go to New Brighton. Next Friday night Ambridge High plays here.

Landis Suggests Some Changes For League Operation

By CHESTER YOULL
International News Service Sports Writer

CHICAGO, Jan. 27.—Commissioner Kenesaw M. Landis on Friday suggested a complete revision of the operations between major and minor league baseball clubs.

In an official bulletin issued to all club owners, Landis offered a plan calculated to clarify the situation resulting from his recent pronouncements on the farm system, and to establish:

1. Freedom of competition and the proper chance of advancement for the players.

2. Equality of opportunity for the clubs.

3. Assistance for the minor leagues, which opponents of the previous Landis rulings maintain is impossible without farm systems.

The plan, according to the commissioner, seeks to safeguard the legitimate rights and interests of clubs, leagues, players and the public.

Sports World Ramblings

Local Tales in Tidbits—District gazettes erred—which is only human. A story recently rolled off the presses, to the effect that 29 WPIAL cage machines are undefeated to date. The item should have read 30 teams. New Wilmington High is very much a member of the league, in good standing too, and has copped 12 consecutive victories without a setback. The "Greyhounds" were not included in the charmed circle. Probably an oversight. . . . Johnny Carik, the type of athlete you can't help but like, has licked an attack of the flu.

Didya know?—Before taking over the coaching reigns of New Castle High, Phil H. Bridenbaugh was head mentor at Geneva College. . . . Local records fail to show when a Lawrence County Class B team ever defeated New Castle High in any sport. . . . New Castle has never won a state basketball championship. Only a few years ago, the "Canes" missed by a fraction of a minute. . . . Tom McMahon, now a giggle water mixer, met and defeated Jess Willard, ex-heavyweight title holder who was dethroned by Jack Dempsey. . . .

Pennsylvania high schools marched through the 1939 grid season minus a single death resulting from any of the games. As a result, Pennsylvania topped all other states in this respect. The feat is more noteworthy when you take into consideration the fact that more football is played by high school boys in Pennsylvania than anywhere in the United States. This can be traced to coaches who make sure their athletes follow the stringent rules and to the athletes themselves who adhere to the physical code of ethics. During the past 10 years, 13 boys have died as a result of injuries sustained in the sport, in Pennsylvania. . . .

Diamond Shots — Bobby Doerr, Boston Red Sox star, was one of the poorest base stealers in the game last year. He tried his hand at pilfering the sacks 11 times. He was nabbed 10 times. . . . When Landis ruled that Trout was not of legal size and tossed him back, the decree cost the Detroit pitcher more than he ever dreamed of earning in baseball. He could have signed for better than $20,000, not counting the salary he would receive. . . . Benny McCoy, Trout's teammate, who didn't cause any of the moguls to gasp, suddenly became the hottest topic in baseball. When he became a free agent, he became a rich man overnight. It looks like Brooklyn has the inside rail on the real McCoy. . . .

FROM ME TO YOU

By MESEEALL

Here it is the 27th day of January . . . 1940 . . . it just seems like yesterday that we were talking about 1939 and how we all would enjoy Christmas . . . and now it's almost time for the shortest month of the year . . . Soon February will be over and then Easter will be here, and soon the warm weather will be coming more frequent and the flowers will start to bloom, and then school will be out for summer vacation and we can all go swimming in the old swimming hole . . . so why fret about this cold weather . . . it won't do you any good . . . and those who did fret and went South wish they were back North where there's plenty of coal in the cellar and woolen blankets on the beds.

Tomorrow is Sunday . . . the 28th day of January . . . that might not mean much to you yet, but by this time tomorrow we hope it means that you have attended at least one service at your church. The very popular "Go to Church" campaign will start tomorrow, with the pastors of the local churches exchanging pulpits . . . This good old country of ours was built upon strong faith . . . faith in the things that are right and good . . . we can continue to prosper and continue to be a happy people IF we keep our noses to the wheel of life . . . believe in the right things and keep in our hearts the love of our maker . . . During the course of history, countries have prospered, they became rich and the people forgot the church . . . today that country is just in the history books . . . we must not lose sight of the fact that we are not a perfect generation . . . we are an improvement over previous generations, but there will be others to improve over us and our way of thinking . . . let's get the fullness out of life that was meant for us . . . You know right from wrong!

* * *

It takes all kinds of people to make up this old world . . . some people you like and some you are not so crazy about . . . when you become angry at a person don't let him see your anger . . . he then has you under control . . . but that doesn't stop us from saying that New Castle has in its midst one of the most contemptible, two-faced yaps in Pennsylvania . . . and he is not a native of the town by any means . . . some day he will get his ears slapped back, but we hope we will be there with a camera.

Stock Market Trend Unchanged

Little Change In Prices In Performance During Morning Session

By LESLIE GOULD
International News Service
Financial Writer

NEW YORK, Jan. 27.—The stock market drifted aimlessly in today's abbreviated session to continue its string of dull and meaningless performances. Leaders held close to last night's final prices, with the general averages barely changed.

There were few individual changes of note. Douglas Aircraft moved up a point in a generally firm aviation section, which duplicated yesterday's pattern. Borden reached a new 1939-40 top on a fractional gain. Loft also was around its peak.

Among the leaders, General Motors and U. S. Steel ended about unchanged, while Chrysler eased a fraction and Bethlehem gained as much.

Coppers, rails and mail orders were colorless. Some of the oils lost a little ground. Tractions were higher in moderately active dealings.

SOAP NUT TREE

Soap nut, the fruit of a handsome tree found throughout India has been used to wash woolen fabrics, silks and jewelry since ancient times, even in preference to soap. Scientists today have learned to extract the essential matter, saponin, from the nut for use in the manufacture of soapless shampoos as a foam stabilizer, and as an emulsifying agent for vegetables and essential oils.

WAR SEES 'SWORD' AND 'PLOUGHSHARE'—SIDE BY SIDE

While Australia sends her young men and war machines to aid the British empire in the European war, the commonwealth does not forget that behind the man with the sword must be another with a plow—food being one of the chief essentials in prosecuting a successful war. The picture above, taken near Wimmera, Victoria, Australia, is symbolic of this fact. With tanks maneuvering in the foreground we see in the distance a farmer busily at work harvesting.

Suggests That Alaska Be Open To Refugees

By WILLIAM S. NEAL
International News Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON Jan. 26.—Possibility of making Alaska a populous state through settlement of from 200,000 to 500,000 European refugees was seen today by Chairman Samuel Dickstein (D) New York, of the house immigration committee. The committee tentatively agreed to hold hearings on an Alaskan settlement bill Feb. 7.

With Secretary of the Interior Ickes endorsing proposals to open sparsely-settled Alaska to foreign refugees, Dickstein is seeking the views of other government department heads.

A bill by Chairman May (D) Kentucky, of the house military affairs committee would admit refugees to Alaska in the interest of national defense. While the bill mentions the desirability of a bigger population in Alaska because of its geographic position to other countries, May said today he introduced it by request and will not press it personally.

Good White People

"If we can settle good, clean, white people in Alaska it would be of immense value to the nation," said Dickstein. "With a population of but 60,000 persons, Alaska has room for expansion. The only question in my mind is the availability of the soil for a big population.

"With 200,000 to 500,000 people we might make Alaska a great empire state. It would be in the interest of national defense. The country ought to be glad to receive people such as Finns, Poles and others who seek to flee their native lands."

Dickstein said any bill passed by congress should make available unused immigration quotas for the next five years. There also would have to be a proviso prohibiting the refugees from coming to continental United States until they have become citizens, he said.

He estimated that unused quotas might make possible settlement of 500,000 people.

Protest Heard

In another quarter, Rep. Stefan (R) Nebraska, urged the department of labor to permit 75 Czecho-Slovakian instructors, brought to the United States by Jan Bata, Czech shoe manufacturer, to remain for one year to train employes in the new Bata factory in Maryland, or in another factory Bata may establish in Nebraska.

"I am reliably informed there are 12,000 to 20,000 refugees in this country, whose passports have been extended and who undoubtedly will remain here permanently, even though they have not complied with immigration laws," said Stefan.

"It seems only fair to permit these instructors, who would teach Americans to hold jobs, should be permitted to remain here."

Protests against importation of foreign instructors for the Bata shoe factory were made by the labor unions.

Marionette Show "Huckleberry Finn" To Be Presented In Junior High Schools

Sponsored by the Lawrence County Parent-Teachers association, "Huckleberry Finn" will be presented in the Benjamin Franklin and George Washington junior high schools on Wednesday, Jan. 31, but the acting will be done by marionettes. It was announced today that the Marionette Guild, masters of the puppet art, would present a morning show at 10:30 in the Benjamin Franklin and an afternoon show at 2:30 p. m. in George Washington.

The Marionette Guild employs the modern technique in puppetry and uses marionettes much larger than those ordinarily employed. They specialize in shows for school children, but have found that adults enjoy the shows as well.

Each year the PTA presents some outstanding attraction for the youngsters, and this year the marionettes get the play.

Dewey Is Elated At Bid To Speak At Portland, Ore.

Will Be Speaker At Lincoln's Birthday Event In Pacific Coast State

By WALTER KIERNAN
International News Service Staff Correspondent

NEW YORK, Jan. 27—There was jubilation today at the political headquarters of Thomas E. Dewey as the result of a cordial telegram from Senator Charles L. McNary, endorsing a bid extended to the G O. P. hopeful to speak in Portland, Oregon, on February 12, Lincoln's birthday.

Dewey's managers were elated with the personal invitation from the Oregon solon who is the canny leader of the senate Republicans, because they have a high regard for his influence in the councils of the party.

The original bid was extended by the Multnomah county Republican Central committee and McNary's invitation could be interpreted as a gesture of courtesy or personal friendship or as a political gesture The Dewey forces hoped it was the latter.

McNary was himself talked up for the nomination in 1936 and today is a stronger power in Republican politics than he was at that time. Dewey's headquarters has been the busiest political headquarters in town since the candiacy of Frank Gannett, Rochester publisher was announced. While Dewey is planning his "On-to-Oregon" tour, Gannett's forces are planning a 48-state plane campaign for their candidate.

Activity at national and state Democratic headquarters is nil in the absence of chairman James A Farley and there is no one who will venture to say what Farley intended in his Winston-Salem speech of Wednesday night which was interpreted in some quarters as the national chairman's warning that he might "take a walk" if the third term question draws an affirmative answer.

Report Cascade Boulevard Rough

Motorists who have had occasion to use Cascade Boulevard in the past six months have found the road to be rough driving and the matter has been called to the attention of the park commission. The road was built some years ago with CWA labor but because it was not topped with a cement or black top surface the winters have played havoc with it.

It has been suggested that the boulevard be used as an experimental unit for the new cement processed earth plan of road building. This process is said to be much cheaper than any other method and provides a road that is adopted to light driving such as the boulevard gets.

Paul Wallace; assistant steward, Robert Henderson; chaplain, Mrs. Ida Wallace; treasurer, Ruth Brodbeck; secretary, Mary Margaret Bright; gate keeper, William R. Dice; ceres, Mrs. Mary Gilkey; pomona, Mrs. Dorothy Anderson; flora, Kathrine McKinley; lady assistant steward, Belle Kyle; executive committee member, David F. Kyle.

Mr. Kyle was assisted in the installation by the following patrons; W. Paul Wallace, Ruth Brodbeck, John Lee Kyle, and Mrs. Nellie M. Kyle, of North Beaver Grange; Mrs. E. M. Byler, of Mahoning Valley Grange; Mrs. M. W. McCracken, of Liberty Grange; Scott Munnell and Viola Munnell, of Willard Grange; and Robert McChesney, of Big Beaver Grange. This team had already conducted installation ceremonies at Mahoning Valley, East New Castle, East Brook, and Plaingrove Granges, as well as Worth and Slippery Rock Granges in Butler county, using the poetic installation form.

North Beaver Grange will observe its 25th anniversary in a few weeks, this being the 26th corps of officers to be installed.

A surprise feature of the meeting occurred when Hugh Fergus, of Slippery Rock, in behalf of the Slippery Rock and Worth Granges of Butler county, presented Mr. and Mrs. Kyle with a beautifully bound Bible as a token of appreciation for their services in installing the officers of those granges for the past several years.

The meeting closed with a social period, during which refreshments were served.
